Skin restoration begins with a Peruvian coco scrub and aromatherapy facial, followed by a massage with Peruvian Inchi Oil, one of the world's richest plant sources of Omega 3. Cell-stimulating rose, patchouli and frankincense encourage natural cell renewal, with final nourishment from a restorative Peruvian coco bean oil.

(John Masefield)

The Dead Sea has been an acclaimed wellness destination for thousands of years, drawing in historic names and travelers from around the world to try its healing powers. Located at the earth's lowest point of elevation, the salts and muds are abundantly rich in sodium, magnesium, potassium, calcium and bromine to help stimulate blood circulation, accelerate the natural exfoliation process, restore skin to its natural pH balance and draw toxins from the body. This revitalizing treatment delivers a fusion of seven oils via traditional massage strokes, working through every ache and enabling muscle recovery. The Dead Sea Salts Body Treatment is good for both body and soul with product proceeds earmarked for Dead Sea preservation efforts that promote drinking water accessibility in the region.

A living fossil and rare gem in the 5,000-year history of Chinese Traditional Medicine, Gingko Leaf has long been used for its age-repairing ability. As the core ingredient in this reparative facial, the Gingko's amino acids help brighten the skin. Furthermore, natural plant fibers provide an instant tightening effect, hyaluronic acids bring back moisture and elasticity to the skin, flavonoids protect against free radicals, and Bamboo Leaf and Motherwort help reduce redness.

24K Collagen Mask Facial (Egypt) $200

'If speech is silver, silence is gold' (Egyptian Proverb)

Fine lines and wrinkles are reduced with every use and its luxurious relaxation effects provide a youthful and glowing appearance.
